PUBLISHER'S NOTE

Memorial Day: Honoring the Ultimate Sacrifice

Dear Reader,

As Memorial Day approaches, we pause to remember and honor those who gave everything for our nation. Each Memorial Day, we stand in solemn gratitude for those who never returned home. The empty chairs at family tables. The children who grew up without a parent. The spouses who faced life alone. Their sacrifice echoes through generations and forms the foundation of the liberties we often take for granted.

My own father was among those who answered the call of duty, serving our country in World War II to keep the world free from tyranny and oppression. He was fortunate to return home, but many of his comrades-in-arms did not. My family's military tradition continued with my cousin, who served as a Lieutenant Colonel in the Army until recently. He earned the distinguished Ranger tab, representing the pinnacle of military training and excellence. Men and women like him stand ready to defend our nation at a moment's notice, prepared to make the same sacrifice as those we honor on Memorial Day.

As we honor the memory of those who gave their lives for our country, we must also recognize the silent battles many of our veterans continue to fight long after their time on the battlefield has ended. Post-Traumatic Stress Disorder, or PTSD, affects a significant number of those who have served, and it is a reminder that the cost of freedom is not always visible. These men and women carry wounds that can't be seen—a burden of trauma, memory, and sacrifice that continues well beyond their return home. Their courage does not end with deployment; it continues every day as they strive to heal and find peace. As a nation, we owe them not only our gratitude but our unwavering support.

As we gather with family and friends this Memorial Day weekend for barbecues and celebrations, let us take a moment—a dedicated, mindful moment—to remember why this holiday exists. Let us teach our children about sacrifice and service. Let us bow our heads in gratitude for those who died defending our values, our freedoms, and our way of life.

May we prove worthy of their sacrifice by being citizens who honor their memory not just on Memorial Day, but every day—by living with purpose, protecting the freedoms they died for, and building a nation worthy of their profound sacrifice.

They gave their tomorrows for our todays. We will never forget.

Addressing Potential Conflicts

A strong co-ownership agreement should outline how to resolve disputes. A dispute resolution clause can require the co-owners to attempt mediation or arbitration to resolve disputes before resorting to contentious and costly litigation.

The agreement can outline a process for one co-owner to buy out the other's share if the other owner wishes to exit the co-ownership arrangement. Key terms to include in a buyout provision are right of first refusal, valuation methods, and payment terms.

Conditions for selling the property, such as requiring unanimous consent or establishing a process for handling disagreements about selling, are best addressed in a co-ownership agreement before acquiring a home.

Addressing co-owned property in legal documents removes as much risk as possible from the homebuying equation. Schedule an appointment to learn more.

New Beginnings speaks out

Wausau's New Beginnings for Refugees, Inc., has called for reconsideration of the Department of Homeland Security's decision to revoke deportation protections for thousands of Afghan people currently living in the U.S. The decision will potentially affect at least 48 people in the Wausau area who are under Temporary Protected Status, according to a press release issued by the organization on May 17.

"These Afghans bravely stood with the United States against the Taliban, risking their lives to support our mission for peace and freedom," reads the press release. "They fled their homeland seeking safety, only to now face the threat of deportation to a country that remains perilously unsafe."

New Beginnings for Refugees is a Wausau-based nonprofit dedicated to ensuring "that refugees have a safe and successful new beginning in Wausau," according to the organization's website.

STEM Shuttle will be at Wings Over Wausau

The Dream Flight USA Foundation will be bringing its STEM Shuttle to the Wings Over Wausau event on June 27 and 28.

The STEM Shuttle is a mobile classroom that travels across the state and prioritizes hands-on learning. The goal of the shuttle is to reinforce the lessons being taught at school in a fun way.

"This experience landed home with our students to help them better understand the 'why' behind the core knowledge they are obtaining each day in class," said Melrose Elementary School Principal Corey Peterson, the principal of Melrose Elementary School.

The tours of the STEM Shuttle will take place at the Downtown Wausau Airport on June 27 and 28.

Marathon County to host Alice in Dairyland

Marathon County has been selected as the host county for the 78th Alice in Dairyland, one of Wisconsin's agricultural ambassador programs. The Wisconsin Department of Agriculture, Trade and Consumer Protection selects a new person each year to serve as a representative of the department.

"This is a unique opportunity to shine a spotlight on the hardworking individuals and innovative practices that define Marathon County's agriculture," said Julie

78th Alice in Dairyland, Sarah Hagenow

Bohr, President of the Partnership for Progressive Agriculture, which organizes the program. "Hosting the 78th Alice in Dairyland aligns perfectly with our mission to educate, promote and advocate for sustainable agriculture."

Beginning in June, the newly elected 78th Alice in Dairyland, Sarah Hagenow, will begin visiting locations around Marathon County to highlight the essential role agriculture plays in the region. Hagenow's first stop will be at the June Dairy Breakfast hosted at Miltrim Farms on June 29.

Tribal Communities receive funding

The U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) has announced more than $90 million in funding for eligible Native American tribes across the Midwest.

"Today's announcement reaffirms our commitment to serve Tribal communities while working towards meeting Indian Country's housing needs," said HUD Secretary Scott Turner.

Locally, the Ho-Chunk Nation will receive more than $7,000, according to a press release from HUD issued on May 16. Other tribes selected by HUD will receive similar amounts. The funding will help tribes with housing development, crime prevention and more.

Wausau police remind drivers, "buckle up"

As part of a national campaign to encourage seatbelt use among drivers and their passengers, the Wausau Police Department will be stepping up patrols designed to cite improper seatbelt use through June 1.

The Click-it or Ticket campaign is an annual campaign put on by the National Highway Safety Traffic Administration (NHSTA), a branch of the Department of Motor Vehicles. According to the NHSTA, among passenger vehicle occupants killed in crashes in 2023, the majority weren't buckled in, especially in accidents that occurred after dark.

"No matter what type of vehicle you drive, one of the safest choices drivers and passengers can make is to buckle up," reads the campaign's official webpage on the NHTSA website.

Wisconsin's primary seat belt law allows police to stop and cite motorists for failing to wear a seat belt, with a $10 fine and no points assigned for first-time violators.

Wisconsin to begin monthly milk sampling

Wausau farmers should expect to start mandatory monthly milk sampling soon. In Wisconsin the USDA is requiring milk testing to help survey a strain of the bird flu called H5N1 which recently had an outbreak in dairy cows. The monthly tests will be used to identify and address the virus in dairy cattle herds. The samples will be primarily gathered through existing milk quality labs, which will help reduce disruption to regular dairy operations. If H5N1 is detected, the farm will be notified and quarantine requirements will go into place. CP

Decisions when your company sells

We have many clients who have been dedicated, hard-working long-time employees performing the same job within the same location, but with a few different employers. Corporate sales or mergers have become commonplace, particularly within certain industries.

A lot can change: operational systems, supervisory structure, corporate culture and, of course, benefit packages. Different companies may offer different plans, and therefore, employees may have decisions to make with what to do with their money. Over time, we've seen some of these long-time employees end up with six or more different accounts on their employer-sponsored retirement plan statements. Years later, it can be difficult to remember or even find out precisely what happened to their previous accounts. Recently, I was working with a new client who remembered she had a pension account with the original company she began her employment with but had not received statements for some time. I advised her to call and ask what happened to that account – did it still exist? She was told that a lump sum from the pension had rolled into one of the accounts on her statement at the inflection point of a merger, but the representative could not articulate exactly which account or when.

If your company changes hands, you may or may not be offered choices with what to do with your retirement funds. Carefully examine your options, ask questions and think through the long term effects of your retirement plan decisions when your company sells. CP

THANK YOU

GREEN BAY PACKERS FANS

Thank you for being a part of the 2025 NFL Draft. I could not be prouder of the Packers organization and our community for this incredible event. There were countless memorable moments and special experiences throughout the whole week. It was a privilege to be a part of it.

As I approach my retirement in July and look back at my time with the Packers, the 2025 NFL Draft is certainly among my proudest accomplishments. But the credit for hosting this event so successfully belongs to our entire community and I want to express my gratitude to so many who contributed:

- To the NFL, for believing Green Bay and our community could host this event. You understood our vision and helped bring it to life.
- To Discover Green Bay and PMI for being our partners on the local organizing committee. We were proud to work alongside you.
- To our host committee who helped raise the funds to bring the Draft to Green Bay. Thank you to our donors for your unwavering support.
- To Governor Evers, Travel Wisconsin and our elected officials at the state level. You appreciated the impact the Draft could have as a statewide event and your support was instrumental in making it happen. We look forward to seeing the impact of this event for years to come.
- To our local municipalities: the City of Green Bay, Village of Ashwaubenon and Brown County. So many departments played a critical role in ensuring a smooth, safe event, especially public safety and first responders. We appreciate all you do.

Most of all, thank you to Packers fans, Wisconsinites and visitors from near and far. You showed your pride in this team and this region. You showed up, provided a warm welcome to new friends (even those cheering for other teams) and created an unforgettable atmosphere here at Lambeau Field and Tittletown. We're grateful to have the greatest fans in sports.

President & CEO

A SPECIAL THANK YOU TO OUR DONORS

April showers BRING May produce

Farmers' market season is here.
Here's what to expect.

Wausau's first few farmers' markets of the summer have already been underway for several weeks.

Currently, there's Big Bull Falls Farm Market on River Dr., held every Saturday morning; the Farmers' Market of Wausau right next door, held every Wednesday and Saturday morning; and the Weston Farmers Market, held Tuesday and Saturday mornings on Schofield Ave. — and that's just to name a few.

As the community enters June, even more markets will join them. With something going on nearly every day of the week, it can be hard for a person to keep track.

If you do, however, you might find that it's worth it.

Fresh produce is not only tastier, but it's better for you, too. Research has shown time and again that crops harvested when fully ripe are more dense in nutrients than crops that are harvested early, like the ones you might typically find at a grocery store. With a shorter distance from farm to table, local farmers have more time to let their crops come into their own — just be sure to keep an eye on which crops are in season. Right about now, there tends to be a flood of greens, asparagus and strawberries, for example, but you might have to wait a few months if you're looking for apples or squash.

Still, you might be surprised at the variety of crops you'll find, especially with an uptick in home gardeners this year. If you're curious, the University of Wisconsin-Madison Extension has a barrow-load of literature for you to peruse, whether you want to know what's in season at the moment or you're looking to start a garden of your own.

Local markets aren't all about grocery shopping, of course. After the lull in social activity following the pandemic, Wausonians increasingly appear to be seeking things to do outside of the house. As attendance at street markets has surged, so too have the number of vendors, many of them artists offering wares ranging from crowd pleasers like knitted plushies to esoteric, eccentric or even a little spooky, like the works of last edition's featured artist, Ashlie Zeidler.

A few of the offerings available at the Farmers' Market of Wausau so far this year. Retrieved from the Farmers Market of Wausau Facebook page.

Every market has a slightly different vibe. If you dig around, you can find some incredibly specialized makers' markets — like the one at last weekend's Hodag Heritage Festival in Rhinelander, for example, which featured primarily Hodag-themed goods. For the most part, the markets that call Wausau home are pretty generalized, but you can rest assured that even at these ones, you'll find at least a few things you couldn't buy anywhere else. That's the fun thing about local markets: They bring in people from all across the community. As a result, you see all sorts of goods on display that you otherwise wouldn't. It's hard for anyone not to have a good time strolling around.

The official webpage for Wausau's Night Markets, which can be found on the River District's website, features a list of the many vendors set to attend, complete with photos of their wares and links to their websites and social media. If you've ever been unsure of how to budget for these kinds of markets, whose availability of wares can be unpredictable at the best of times, then this is a good way to get an idea of what to expect.

There are programs that provide incentives or otherwise remove barriers for consumers to shop at farmers markets. For example, the Wisconsin Department of Health Services offers the Farmers Market Nutrition Program to residents enrolled in the Special Supplemental Nutrition Program for Women, Infants and Children, providing new mothers and children up to five years old with allowances to buy locally grown produce as well as information on sustaining a healthy, nutritious diet. A similar program, the Senior Farmers' Market Nutrition Program, is available for seniors, and for those who receive SNAP benefits, the USDA's SNAP Retailer Locator tool can be used to locate participating farmers' markets — such as the Farmers' Market of Wausau — on top of retail stores.

Similarly, Aspirus Health offers "fruit and vegetable prescriptions" through its Prescription for Health (FVRx) program, which is designed to help eligible patients add the fruits and vegetables they need to their diets by providing them with vouchers that can be redeemed at participating farmers' markets. There are several of said markets in the greater Wausau area alone, including the Farmers' Market of Wausau, the Weston Farmers' Market and Aspirus' own farmers' market held in the Aspirus Corporate Office parking lot.

With a growing local market scene around Wausau, rising supermarket prices and a number of resources available through local agencies, it's as good a time as ever to start shopping local. Plus, you can rest assured knowing that you're supporting your local farmers and artisans and getting the best quality produce for yourself and your family. CP

HIGHLIGHTS

CLAY GARDEN SNAILS

PIZZA ON THE PATIO

Clay Garden Snails

Thursday 5/22 | Marathon County Public Library, Wausau

Add a little whimsy to your outside space with a garden snail you can craft out of Sculpey, a polymer clay that is soft, pliable and easy to mold. Whether you're a crafter or just looking for a way to unwind, this hands-on workshop will guide you through shaping and decorating your snail. All materials will be provided. No registration required. 2:30–3:30 p.m. For more information, call 715-261-7230.

Dig Deep at Malarkey's Pub

Friday 5/23 | Malarkey's Pub, Wausau

Malarkey's promises a boot-stomping good time this Friday with the return of Stevens Point native string band Dig Deep. Sit back with a whiskey and let the good times roll. 8 p.m.

Art isn't cheap

Rise Up is here to help

For those in the know, Rise Up's free community art studio isn't the newest addition to Wausau's creative scene, but with a new downtown location, it's back and ready to serve more artists than ever.

The studio was formerly housed underneath Whitewater Music Hall, but after its closure in February, Rise Up was forced to find a new home for its makerspace.

"We were originally under Whitewater Music Hall, so we started kinda slowly ramping up the community makerspace in 2023. And that was invite-only," said Jacquelyn Tolktsdorf, program coordinator of Rise Up Central Wisconsin, a nonprofit dedicated to healing, transforming and inspiring the community through art.

The organization is behind some of the murals around the community, which were painted by community volunteers using a paint-by-numbers technique. In the studio's pilot days, these volunteers made up most of its patrons until last September, when it was fully opened to the public.

"We were bursting at the seams," said Tolktsdorf. Between a wide assortment of donated materials and increasing community demand, there simply wasn't enough space in the former studio to serve as many artists as they hoped.

"We saw some gaps in the community of expensive art classes and a kind of flip flop in Wausau's average income and people's want to take art classes... and not being able to afford it," Tolktsdorf explained.

So with the loss of their former space came an opportunity to expand.

"We're a very grassroots nonprofit, so when we started to look for commercial spaces, they were very out of our price range."

Co-founder and former President Christy Keele offered the break Rise Up needed. As her family was interested in purchasing the N Third St. property the studio now calls home, she stepped down from her position as president and offered Rise Up a space for discounted rent.

Located at 622 N Third St., the new studio is 10 times larger than the previous one. As a result, Rise Up can now serve a wider array of creatives, including photographers — thanks to a donation of backgrounds and lighting equipment by photographer Emily Voss of VOSStudios, who formerly called the space home — and quilters.

The space is open to artists of any medium and skill level, whether they're professional artists who can't yet afford their own space while they build their portfolios, teenagers interested in learning how to sew or families looking for a craft project.

"You kind of go nuts in the options of what people can do," said Tolktsdorf. This is due in large part to the number and variety of materials donated by community members — everything from professional-grade materials to machinery to "junk drawers."

"We've never had empty shelves yet because we've had so many people donate this or that," Tolktsdorf explained. "People get excited about bringing in their junk drawer stuff, because you can make anything with that."

As the future of art grants becomes more uncertain, Rise Up will need that community support more than ever. Presently, they're looking for volunteers willing to teach people how to sew, and there will soon be options to rent the space out to community members by the hour in order to help cover the cost of rent.

Rise Up held the new space's ribbon-cutting ceremony on May 17. Currently, the organization is working on establishing updated hours for the space. Tolktsdorf said that she expects those hours to be announced in the near future and that those interested in keeping up can keep an eye on the organization's Facebook page.

"Being downtown, we really want to have the makerspace not just available to the community, but we want to see more foot traffic coming to the local businesses that are next to us," said Tolktsdorf. Current discussions about hours revolve around how to most effectively uplift neighbors while keeping within Rise Up's own limitations as a nonprofit.

Rise Up is a grassroots nonprofit and relies primarily on community contributions to stay afloat.
