PREPARE YOUR FAMILY FOR HURRICANE SEASON

(Family Features) Severe weather events, like hurricanes, are powerful and can come on quickly, often leaving a trail of destruction in their wake. Because power outages are also common with strong storms and natural disasters, preparing your family ahead of time can help ensure safety.

Making a portable generator part of your plan ensures access to safe food storage and preparation, hot water, lights and important radio or television updates in the aftermath of a storm when it can be difficult to predict when full power will be restored.

While portable generators can be valuable tools in helping protect your family during and after a hurricane, they must be used properly to avoid potentially deadly carbon monoxide buildup, which is emitted as toxic engine exhaust and cannot be seen, smelled or tasted.

Although it is impossible to completely eliminate the hazards associated with improper generator use, models that comply with the American National Standards Institute (ANSI)/Portable Generator Manufacturers' Association (PGMA) G300 Standard provide enhanced safety through carbon monoxide sensors and shutdown features that can help protect your family. Also consider these tips for safe operation from PGMA:

- Keep the operator's manual in a safe place so you can refer to it easily for further information about safe generator operation and potential hazards.

- To avoid dangerous carbon monoxide accumulation, always "Take It Outside," which means never running a portable generator indoors, such as in garages, basements, crawl spaces, breezeways, sheds or other partially enclosed spaces.

- Always place a portable generator downwind and point the engine exhaust away from occupied spaces. Also avoid placing your generator near windows, doors or vents, as carbon monoxide gas can accumulate and potentially be drawn indoors.

- If you feel sick, dizzy or weak while using your portable generator, get to fresh air immediately and call 911 for emergency medical attention as you may be suffering from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Be prepared for the unexpected this hurricane season and find more information about safely operating a portable generator during severe weather at pgmaonline.com and takeyourgeneratoroutside.com.

HOW TO PICK AN EMERGENCY MEETING PLACE

Emergency meeting places are an important part of any emergency plan. It's recommended that your family has two designated meeting places: one just outside your home and one just outside your neighborhood.

Dumpster Rentals, Junk Removal & Hauling

Water Well Hurricane Prep

Protect your wellhead and pump.
If your pump and wellhead are exposed to the elements, cover or secure your equipment.

Protect Electrical Components.
If you lose power, turn off your pump at the circuit breaker and leave it off during the storm.

Fill Tubs and Sinks
Before the storm hits, fill your tub and sinks with water to wash hands and flush toilets.

After the Storm
If you have flooding, do not turn on the power. Do not go near it to avoid electrical shock. Wait for the flood water to recede before approaching.

Inspect the Well and Equipment.
If you did not have any flooding, inspect the equipment and, if there is damage, call a professional before you turn on or try to operate the pump.
